

Abstract

Methods and compositions for the production of recombinant proteins in a human cell line. The methods and compositions are particularly useful for generating stable
5 expression of human recombinant proteins of interest that are modified post-translationally, for example, by glycosylation. Such proteins may have advantageous properties in comparison with their counterparts produced in non-human systems like Chinese Hamster Ovary cells.

10